Campaign Comply Launches Campaign Finance Compliance Platform in California

The campaign compliance platform helps first-time candidates, political committees, and political clubs and organizations navigate campaign finance forms, deadlines, and political ad disclaimers

Los Angeles, CA – Today, Campaign Comply announced the official launch of its California campaign compliance platform, designed to help first-time local candidates, small campaigns, political committees, and political clubs navigate campaign finance compliance requirements and manage required forms, filing deadlines, and campaign communication disclaimers.

Built by election attorneys and campaign professionals, Nick Warshaw and Clark Lee, Campaign Comply harnesses cutting-edge artificial intelligence-assisted technology, coupled with human verification processes, to tailor the platform for campaigns and organizations that need affordable and practical compliance support to meet jurisdiction-specific requirements.

“Campaign finance can be intimidating and confusing, especially for first-time candidates and local committees,” said Nick Warshaw, Esq. “Campaign Comply was built to make the campaign compliance process more navigable and accessible, so first-time candidates and small political clubs are empowered with resources to fulfill their compliance obligations and minimize avoidable mistakes.”

Campaign Comply features step-by-step checklists and tools for launching a campaign or starting a political committee; navigating ongoing compliance on when, what, and where to file required forms; and generating custom campaign communication disclaimers in California Fair Political Practices Commission-regulated formats.

“Anyone who has worked on a campaign knows that compliance isn’t just paperwork – it affects every aspect of fundraising, spending, communications, and public trust,” said Clark Lee, Esq. “Campaign Comply makes the campaign compliance process more manageable with practical workflows and plain-language guidance, so campaigns and organizations can stay organized and focus on community organizing and winning, not paperwork.”
